

Disk Usage

We can check the estimated file space usage of the current directory and its subdirectories by using the du command.

```
du -sh *
```

It is displaying the size in human readable format.

Next we can use df command which is a powerful tool that displays information about the filesystems currently mounted in the system. It shows the used and available disk space in human readable format

```
df -h
```
